SEYMOUR DISTRICT MEMORIAL HOSPITAL

REMOVAL, USE AND DISPOSAL OF HUMAN TISSUE

INFORMATION SHEET

Why is tissue being removed?

Tissue is removed during surgery or medical procedures so that doctors are able to diagnose what is wrong with you and can advise on the best way to treat you.

Who will remove the tissue?

Tissue is only ever removed by a registered medical practitioner. This is usually the doctor treating you.

Do I have to sign a separate consent form to have tissue removed?

No. The treating doctor will ask you to sign a consent form for the surgery or medical procedure that he/she will be performing. The form you sign may or may not refer to the removal of your tissue. You can refuse to have tissue removed.

What happens to tissue after it has been removed?

Your tissue will be used for diagnosis and treatment. It may also be used for:

- Approved research
- Training; and/or
- Laboratory quality procedures

There are strict guidelines for the removal and use of human tissue in Australia. All human tissue is treated with respect. All your details remain confidential.

Who regulates the use of tissue?

The National Pathology Accreditation Advisory Council produces guidelines that describe standards for the use of tissue for diagnosis in Australia. The use of tissue for research purposes is regulated by the National Health and Medical Research Council (NHMRC).

What about genetic information?

All tissue contains genetic information. This means that some of your tissue may be of use in genetic research. However, your tissue will never be used for these purposes without your consent.

How is tissue disposed of?

All tissue is disposed of with care and in accordance with the Environmental Protection Authority.
